Happy May (well, almost)!!

Snow cancellations have tacked on a few extra days to the end of the school year so there are still ALMOST two months of school left. How can you help teachers end the school year with a unique arts experience? Now would be a good time to send any promotional materials you have to school administrations and PTOs for a short 1 day residency or school visit. It is also a good time to start a conversation about a longer more in-depth residency for the 2017-2018 school year. Once summer comes, teachers and administrators will be hard to get in touch with until the Fall. The Department of Education has a list of all schools and school districts with contact information.

What are you up to?

We would love to hear some quick information about any residency you've completed in the past 2 years. When you have a few extra moments, fill out our short survey so we can better understand the scope of work that is being done across the state. The residencies you enter don't need to be funded by the Arts Council.

The Arts Education Teaching Artist Roster is moving! Update your profile on Creative Ground by June 30th.

If you have not heard, the NH State Council on the Arts will soon be using Creative Ground to host all Artist Roster profiles. You can create and edit your own profile at any time. You will also be able to upload your own media samples and reach organizations across New England. Your will be endorsed by NHSCA with an Artist Roster credential at the bottom of your profile. The NHSCA roster will be removed from our website after June 30, 2017.

InResidence Spotlights:

- Brian Evans Jones completes his biggest teaching artist project yet: teaching poetry to 80 second-graders at Central School in South Berwick, ME.
- Lizz Van Saun collaborates with students at Belmont and Pittsfield to learn about town history and contribute mosaic murals to the community.
- Jasmine Shah joined Granite State Arts Academy for India Week and taught students three traditional dances.
